Check and Double Check the information in your Timesheets

To comply with legal obligations to maintain accurate time records and to ensure that employees are paid for all the hours worked, SJGH requires employees to accurately record their hours worked during each workday.

Signing a Timesheet: Signing a timesheet typically refers to an employee providing acknowledgment and confirmation of the accuracy and completeness of the recorded hours worked during a specific period. By signing the timesheet, the employee is attesting that the information provided is true and correct to the best of their knowledge. It signifies their agreement with the recorded hours and serves as a verification of their work hours for that period.

Approving a Timesheet: Approving a timesheet involves a managerial or supervisory review and confirmation of the employee's recorded work hours. The approval process typically involves checking the accuracy and appropriateness of the hours worked, verifying adherence to company policies and procedures, and ensuring compliance with labor laws and contractual obligations.
